

Please insert the following Abstract as a separate page after the claims.

ABSTRACT

A method for producing confectionary products having an outer shell made of a substance that is placed inside a mold into which a temperature-controlled male die is subsequently introduced. The substance is placed under pressure after the male die is introduced.